Actually Wordpress blogger suffers more from such comments. These are weird and by default Wordpress don't have a feature to stop em.

Its not only WordPress blogs. I've faced more horrible spam comments in my Joomla site as well.

Thanks to WordPress, at least, it has many plugins that can fight against them.

PageRank Status Extension - Open the PageRank Status Extension and go to the Page Info tab. This will show you the total number of links on a page and how many of those links are No Follow and the ratio of Do Follow versus No Follow links on the page.

The screenshot shows the PageRank Status Chrome SEO Toolbar interface. The 'Page Info' tab is selected, displaying a table of page metadata. A red arrow points to the 'Internal links' and 'External links' rows, both showing '2 (0 nofollow)'. The toolbar also features a 'Green Geeks' advertisement and various utility buttons like 'Update History' and 'Options'.
